Our approach

Bombardier places the highest importance on respecting human rights and maintains its commitment and ensures respect through various mechanisms.

Bombardier is dedicated to upholding the United Nations Global Compact (UNGC). A signatory since 2007, it is committed to actively promoting its ten principles, and produces a yearly Communication on Progress which provides updates on how the Bombardier group addresses each principle through its operations, including the respect of human rights and the elimination of compulsory labour and child labour.

Our Code of Ethics and Business Conduct addresses ethical conduct in our work environment, business practices and relationships with external stakeholders. The Code applies at all times, without exception, to all members of the Board of Directors and all Bombardier employees, including management. Bombardier suppliers and partners as well as third parties, such as agents, are also expected to adhere to the Code when dealing with, or acting on behalf of Bombardier. Our Code explains the standards of behaviour that Bombardier expects and identifies guiding principles consistent with the group's values and reputation.

In line with Bombardier's vision for its suppliers, Bombardier actively engages its supply chain by the adherence of its suppliers to its Supplier Code of Conduct that has been developed with recognition of the UNGC's principles. The Code sets the company's expectations for suppliers on the respect of human rights, legal compliance, labour, health and safety, the environment, anti-corruption, ethics and governance. It includes specific provisions on the prohibition of child labour, forced or compulsory labour, as well as more generally on respect and dignity.

Bombardier's Human Rights Statement also formalizes our commitment to address and respect human rights at a global level and clearly indicates our expectations regarding human rights to all our business partners. The statement was developed in accordance with the principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Labour Organization's Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work and the United Nations Convention Against Corruption.

Assessing and managing risk in our supply chain

All employees are required to sign our Code of Ethics and Business Conduct as part of their hiring process.

All suppliers that sign a contract with Bombardier are required to adhere to our Supplier Code of Conduct and we have the right to verify their compliance with the Code. Such verification is conducted by way of a supplier's self-evaluation or through audits and spot-checks¹ at the supplier's facilities completed by trained Bombardier procurement, engineering or quality managers.

Regular assessments of Bombardier's supply chain footprint are conducted at a global level to identify risks and potential breaches.

Responsible sourcing is an industry-wide issue. Designated Bombardier teams work cooperatively with peers and associations such as the International Aerospace Environmental Group and Railsponsible to share best practices and adopt consistent standards regarding responsible sourcing.

We put a premium on following the Code of Ethics and Business Conduct and on our ability to quickly respond to any breaches. Employees, customers, suppliers or others who become aware of a possible violation have a responsibility to report it and we provide multiple channels for them to do so on a confidential basis through:

- Internal company resources, including supervisors, human resources representatives, legal services representatives, internal audit representatives or next level of management;
- Bombardier's Ethics and Compliance Office, which can be reached by email, phone or written mail; and
- EthicsPoint, a free, independent and confidential whistleblower hotline available 24 hours a day, seven days a week anywhere in the world, and can be accessed by phone or online, with the option to remain anonymous.

Continuous improvement

Bombardier considers the respect of human rights to be a fundamental corporate responsibility and a value governing all our activities. We place the highest importance on respecting human rights while conducting our business activities everywhere we operate.

In 2017, we continued to implement our solid procurement strategy and took particular care in managing our supply chain and strengthening capacity building with suppliers to ensure they meet the highest standards in terms of quality and respect of human rights.

This statement has been approved by the Board of Directors of the Company, for the financial year ending December 31, 2017.
